"A Bee Line for Boston." The following touching pas-ages are from the speech of Hon. Mr. Boteler, of Va., delivered in the House of Representative a few days since: The district which I represent and the county from which I come—that county made famous by the raid of Brown—was the first, the very first in all the South, to send succor to Massachusetts. In one of the most beautiful spots in that beautiful county, within rifle shot of my residence, at the base of the hill, where a glorious spring leaps out into sunlight from beneath the guarded roof of a thunder riven oak, there assembled on the 10th of July, the very first band of Southern men who marched to the aid of Massachusetts. They met there, and their rulying cry was, "A bee line for Boston."

The district which I come—that county was a problemated in the sound himself. "I feel like the jack-law in the church steeple," was the etrage rely. The physician withdraw sadiy from the believe in the family were standing together, and the stury oak was perioding at the top. He could see no method in the answer which the question cereived. One of the ladice present, who knew Mr. Webster better, did not believe that his mind was wandering, and quievity steepping to his beautie, asked him how be found himself. "I feel like the base to another part of the room, where some members of the family was the etrage rely. That beautiful and peaceful valley had never been polluted by the footsteps of a foe; for even the Indians themselves kept it free from the enemy. It was the hunting range and neutral ground of the aborigines. This band assembled there, and a "beedine for Boston" was made from thence. Before they marched they made a pledge that all who survived would assemble there fifty years after that day .-It was my pride and pleasure to be pres-cut when the fifty years rolled around.— Three aged, feeble, tottering men—the survivors of that glorious band of one hundred and twenty-were all who were left to keep their trust, and be faithful to the pledge made fifty years before to their companions, the bones of many of whom were bleaching on the Northern hills.

Sir, I have often heard from the last survivors of that band of patriots, the insidents of their first meeting, and their march, how they made some six hundred miles in twenty days-thirty miles a day -and how, as they neared their point of destination, Washington, who happened to be making a reconnoissance in the neighborhood, saw them approaching, and recognized their linsey woolsey hunting shirt of old Virginia, rode up to meet and greet them to the eamp; how, when he saw their captain-his old companion in arms, Stephenson, who stood by his side at the Great Meadows, on Braildock's fatal field, and in many an Indian campaign, and who reported himself to hi comman ler at 'the right bank of the Po tenne'-he sprang from his horse and casped his old friend and companion in arms with both hauds. LEELINAU,

THE LOST DAUGHTER.

Leelinan was the favorite daughter of an able hunter who lived near the base of the lofty highlands called Kang Wudjoo, on the shore of Lake Superior. From her earliest youth she was observed to be pensive and timid, and to spend much of her time in solitude and fasting. When-ever she could leave her father's lodge she would fly to remote haunts and recesses in the woods, or sit upon some igh promontory of rock or ricoking the In such places she was supposed to invoke her guardian spirit. But amid all the sylvan hannis, so numerous in a highly picturesque section of country, none had so great attractions for her mind as a forest of pines, on the open shore, called Manitowak, or the Sacred Grove. It was one of those consecrated places which are supposed to be the residence of the PUR WUDJ ININEE, or little wild men of the woods, and Misney Ino-KINAKOO, or turtle-spirits, two classes of minor spirits or fairies who love romantic scenes. Owing to this notion, it was seldom visited by Indians, who attribute to these imaginary beings a mischievous agency. And whenever they were comalled by stress of weather to make a landing on this part of the coast, they never failed to leave an offering of to-sacco, or some other article. To this fearful spot Leelinan had made her way at an early age, gathering strange flowers or plants, which she would bring home to her parents, and relate to them nothing more to settle her purpose. all the little incidents that had occurred | On the evening preceding the day fixed did not wish to lay any violent commands and put on the ornaments she possessed. upon her.
